

Delivering outstanding Health, Safety and Environmental (HS&E) performance is critical to our business and at the core of who Cavendish Nuclear is.

We are committed to the health, safety and welfare of our workforce, contractors, customers, the public and the protection of the environment – we will never compromise on this.

We recognise our commitment to delivering outstanding performance in safety and pay particular attention to:

- Personal safety and welfare
- Process safety
- Nuclear safety
- Environmental safety

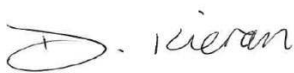

We place safety at the forefront of our work and strive continuously for a culture that takes personal ownership, is open and honest and learns from its success and failures.

We will always aim for 'zero harm' to people and the environment and are never satisfied to rest on our laurels.

We aim for the highest standards of safety and we are committed to sending all of our workforce, contractors and customers Home Safe Every Day.

We meet Babcock International Group standards for HS&E and deliver outstanding HS&E performance by:

- Looking after our own health, safety and welfare and that of others
- Seeking to adhere to legislative requirements and the highest appropriate standards and requirements
- Caring for the environment by minimising our impact, fulfilling our compliance obligations and seeking a sustainable way wherever possible
- Championing health, safety and the environment both corporately and as individuals
- Never walking past something that is not right
- Taking time to identify problems and put them right
- Making time for health, safety and the environment
- Providing training and investing in health, safety and the environment
- Listening, involving and engaging with all interested parties and having open communication on Health, Safety and Environment
- Sharing our knowledge, ideas and successes to continuously learn and improve

Dominic Keiran
Managing Director, Cavendish Nuclear Ltd

Brian Robinson
Capability, Engineering & Assurance Director